THE FOUR FINGERS

By FRED M. WHITE,

Author of

The Crimson Blind; The Cardinal Moth; The Weight of the Crown; The Corner House; The Slaves of Silence; Craven Fortune; The Fatal Dose; Netta.

Le Fenwick paused and glanced significantly at Fenwick's maimed hand. The latter had no more to say; all his swaggering assurance had left him—he sat huddled up in his chair a picture of abject terror and misery. "You can help me if you will," he said hoarsely. "You are speaking of Zary. That man is no human being at all, he is no more than a cold-blooded tiger, and yet he would do anything for you and yours. If you asked him to spare me—"

Fenwick broke off and covered his face with his hands. His shoulders were heaving with convulsive sobs now, tears of maudlin self-pity ran through his fingers. For the time being, at any rate, the man's nerve was utterly gone. He was prepared to make any conditions to save his skin. Agitated and broken as he was, his cunning mind was yet moving swiftly. A little time ago, these two men would not have dared to intrude themselves upon his presence, he had held them like prisoners in the hollow of his hand; and now it seemed to him that they must feel their position to be impregnable, or they would never have intruded upon him in this bold fashion.

"I am not the man I was," he gasped. "It is only lately that my nerve seems to have utterly deserted me. You do not know what it is to be fighting in the dark against a foe so cold and relentless as Felix Zary. When the first warning came I was alarmed. The second warning frightened me till I woke in the night with a suffocating feeling at my heart as if I were going to die. Against the third warning I took the most elaborate precautions; but it came all the same, and since then I have been drinking to drown my terror. But what is the good of that?—how little does it serve me in my sober moments? As I said just now, Zary would do anything for your family, if you would induce him to forego that dreaded vengeance which hangs over me—"

"Impossible," Le Fenwick said coldly. "Zary is a fanatic, a dreamer of dreams; he has religion of his own which no one else in the world understands but himself. He firmly believes that some divine power is impelling him on, that he is merely an instrument in the hands of the Maker of the universe. There have been other beings of the same class in a way. Charlotte Corday believed herself to be the chosen champion of Heaven when she stabbed the French monster in his bath. Nothing I could say or do would turn Zary from what he believes to be his duty. The only thing you can do is to go away and lose yourself in some foreign country where Zary cannot follow you."

"Impossible," Fenwick said hoarsely. "I could not get away. If the man possesses the powers he claims he would know where to find me, even if I hid myself in the depths of a Brazilian forest. I tell you I am doomed. I cannot get away from the inevitable."

Fenwick slipped from his chair and fairly grovelled in his anguish on the floor. It was a pitiable sight, but one that moved the watchers with contempt. They waited patiently enough for the paroxysm of terror to pass and for Fenwick to resume something like the outer semblance of manhood. He drew himself up at length, and wiped the tears from his sickly yellow face.

"I cannot think," he said. "My mind seems to have ceased to act. If either of you have any plan I shall be grateful to hear it. It seems almost impossible—"

The speaker suddenly paused, for there came from downstairs the unmistakable sounds of high voices raised in expostulation. It occurred to Fenwick for a moment that his subordinates were quarrelling among themselves; then his quick ears discerned the sound of strange voices. He rose to his feet and made in the direction of the door, and a voice whispered, asking to be admitted. Evors glanced at Le Fenwick in an interrogative kind of way, as if asking for instructions. The latter nodded, and the door opened. The man in the light slippers staggered into the room, his red face white and quivering, his whole aspect eloquent of fear.

"What is it?" Fenwick whispered. "What's the trouble? Why don't you speak out, man, instead of standing there like that?"

The man found his voice at last, his words came thickly. "They are here," he said. "The men from America. You know whom I mean. Get away at once. Wait for nothing. Those two devils Egan and Grady are downstairs in the hall."

CHAPTER XXV.

An Act of Charity.

Fenwick looked at the speaker as if he did not exactly comprehend what he had said. The man's mind was apparently dazed, as if the accumulation of his troubles had been too much for him. He passed his hand across his forehead, striving to collect his thoughts and to find some way of facing this new and unexpected peril.

"Say that again," he faltered. "I don't quite understand. Surely Egan and Grady are in New York."

"They are both down in the hall," the man in the light slippers said, vehemently. "And, what's more, they know that you are here. If you don't want to spend the night in jail, get away without any further delay."

Fenwick could only look about him helplessly. It seemed to him futile to make any further effort. Turn which way he would, there was no avenue open to him. He looked imploringly in the direction of Charles Evors.

"I think I can manage it," the latter said. "Now, you fellow, whatever your name is, leave the room at once and go downstairs, and close the door behind you."

The man in the light slippers slunk away, and, at a sign from Le Fenwick, Evors closed the door. Evors jumped to his feet and crossed the room to where a picture was let into the dark panelling. He pushed this aside and disclosed a dark opening beyond it Fenwick's astonished gaze. The latter stared about him.

"Now, get through there," Evors said. "It's a good thing for you that I know all the secrets of the old house. There are many panels and passages here, for this used to be a favorite hiding place for the fugitive cavaliers in the time of Cromwell."

"But where does it go to?" Fenwick stammered.

Evors explained that the passage terminated in a bedroom a little distance away. He went on to say that Fenwick would only have to press his hand upon the wall and that the corresponding panel of the bedroom would yield to his touch.

"It is the Blue Room," he said, "in which you will find yourself presently. Wait there and I'll see what I can do for you. I fancy that I shall be able to convey you outside the walls of the house without anybody being the wiser."

Fenwick crept through the hole, and Evors pulled the panel across, leaving the room exactly as it had been a few minutes before. He had hardly done so when there was a sound of footsteps outside, and without ceremony the American detectives came in. The occupants of the room had had ample time to recover their self-possession, so that they could look coolly at the intruders and demand to know what this outrage meant. The Americans were clearly puzzled.

"I am sure I beg your pardon," Egan said, "but I understand that Mr. Fenwick is the tenant of the house."

"That is so," Evors said. "Do you generally come into a gentleman's house in this unceremonious fashion?"

"Perhaps I had better explain my errand," Egan said. "We are down here with a warrant for the apprehension of Mark Fenwick, and we know that a little time ago he was in the house. He is wanted on a charge of stealing certain valuables in New York, and also for uttering counterfeit coins. We quite expected to find him here."

"In that case, of course, you have perfect liberty to do as you please," Evors said. "I may explain that I am the only son of Lord Merton, and that I shall be pleased to do anything to help you that lies in my power. By all means search the house."

Grady appeared as if about to say something, but Egan checked him. It was no time for the Americans to disclose the fact that they knew all about the murder of Mr. George Le Fenwick, and how Evors had been more or less dragged into the business. Their main object now was to get hold of Fenwick without delay, and take him back with them to London.

"Very well, sir," Egan said. "We need not trouble you any further. If our man is anywhere about the house, we are bound to find him. Come along, Grady."

They hustled out of the room, and presently they could be heard ranging about the house. As the two friends discussed the situation in whispers the door was flung open and Vera came in. Her face was aflame with indignation—she was quivering with a strange, unaccustomed passion.

"Charles," she cried, "I hardly expected to see you here."

"Perhaps you are equally surprised to see Evors," Le Fenwick said. "We have had an explanation—"

"I have already met Charles," Vera said. "But he did not tell me you were coming down here. Still, all that is beside the point. There will be plenty of time for full explanation later on. What I have to complain of now is an intolerable outrage on the part of Mark Fenwick. He has actually dared to intrude himself on the privacy of my bedroom, and despite all I can say—"

"By Jove, this is a piece of bad luck," Evors exclaimed. "My dear Vera, I had not the slightest idea that you were occupying the blue room. In fact, I did not know that it was being used at all. I managed to send Fenwick that way for the simple reason that there are two American detectives downstairs with a warrant for his arrest. It was your brother's idea to get him away—"

"What for?" Vera asked, passionately. "Why should we trouble ourselves for the safety of an abandoned wretch like that? He is the cause of all our troubles and sorrows. For the last three years he has blighted the lives of all of us, and there is worse than that—for, as sure as I am speaking to you now, the blood of our dear father is upon his head."

"Yes, and mine might have been also, but for a mere miracle," Le Fenwick said. "He tried to do away with me—he would have done away with all of us if he had only dared. But one thing do not forget—he is our mother's only brother."

Vera started and bit her lips. It was easy to see that the appeal was not lost upon her, and that she was ready now to fall in with her brother's idea. She waited quite humbly for him to speak.

"I am glad you understand," he said. "It would never do for us to hand that man over to justice, richly as he deserves his sentence. And you can help us if you will. Those men will search every room in the house, including yours. If you are in there when they come and show a certain amount of indignation—"

"Oh, I quite understand," Vera responded. "And I will do what I can for that wretched creature."

"What is he doing now?" Le Fenwick asked.

"He has huddled himself up in a wardrobe," Vera explained. "He seems so paralyzed with fear that I could not get anything like a coherent account of what had happened. Anyway, I will go back to my room now. You need not be afraid for me."

As the matter turned out, Vera had no time to spare, for she was hardly back in her room before the detectives were at the door. She came out to them, coldly indignant, and demanded to know what this conduct meant. As was only natural, the Americans were profoundly regretful and almost abjectly polite, but they had their duty to perform, and they would be glad to know if Vera had seen anything of Mark Fenwick, for whose apprehension they held a warrant.

Queer Ways of Old Days.

Interesting reminiscences of St. John, N.B., are being given in the St. John Globe, by Clarence Ward.

Telling of the treatment of people in the asylum for the insane nearly four score years ago, he says:

"Blood-letting and restraint appear to have played a prominent part, and light and bathing to have been considered luxuries. Amongst the items charged for maintenance are the following: Paid W. McBay, for twelve hogshead of water (for one month), one pound, fifteen shillings. W. Hammond, for thirty pounds of rush lights, one pound, five shillings. Harvie and Allan, for eight tin bleeding cups and one tin pan, seven shillings and sixpence. D. Collins (saddler), for three hand muffers, one pound, fifteen shillings. G. T. Ray, for twelve strait waistcoats, at twenty shillings each, twelve pounds.

"The twelve hogsheads of water above mentioned must have been for drinking and cooking purposes—'tea water,' as it was called in old times. The item for rush-lights gives one the impression of people living in the 'dark' ages—and the reason for their use must have been a rigid economy. It is difficult to conceive how they managed after dark to follow their occupations with no other light than that furnished by a rush light—which was made from the pith of a rush dipped in tallow, the flame of which was not much brighter than the glimmer of a match."

Mistaken Identity.

... story is going the rounds of Winnipeg just now which may or may not be original. It appears that a number of financial people were floating a company which was to be European in character, but which was also to have a Winnipeg board of directors. One man was sent to London to organize that end, while his business associates arranged the domestic portion. He reached London and did his work there; then went on to Berlin and thence to Paris. Arriving there with his arrangements complete, he sent a code message to the following effect: "Just arrived. Send names best men for local directorate." When this message reached Winnipeg, it was handed over to a clerk to translate. He either used the wrong code or was a blunderer, and produced the following translation of the code words: "Just arrived with shaft out of level and engine strained."

Campbellton's Recovery.

Campbellton, N.B., the town which was nearly wiped off the map by fire, is rapidly growing up again. Building operations on a very large scale are being undertaken, and as the new fire laws prohibit the erection of frame buildings in the centre of the town, the terrible conflagration of several months ago is not likely to be repeated. Among improvements planned is the construction of a modern electric power plant to replace the present temporary structure.

Result of a Fad.

Poverty came in at the door. Love immediately flew out of the window.

"Ah," said those who observed, "this is what comes of being fresh air faddists!"

Provision For Regent.

By a special Regency Act, passed last year, Queen Mary was appointed Regent in the event of a child of King George V. succeeding to the throne before the age of eighteen.

For Health and Economy Eat more Bread

TEN cents will feed an ordinary family a day on first class bread. This does not mean ordinary bread. For there is an important difference between ordinary bread and first class bread.

It isn't a difference of looks or methods of making or baking. It is a difference of nutrition, food value, healthfulness. And this food value depends on the flour used. For there is a wide difference between flours.

If all flour were the best flour, then all bread, properly made, would be good bread. But all flour is not first class because all wheat is not first class. Wheat, you know, varies in quality almost as much as apples or potatoes; and there are as many different grades of wheat as there are grades of butter—or wool.

And every difference in grade represents an actual difference in nourishing value, food elements, wholesomeness. Flour made from a low grade of wheat is by no means so healthful as flour made from high grade wheat. Now the wheat that goes into

is of the very highest grade. It contains the highest possible percentage of nutritive value. The makers of "ROYAL HOUSEHOLD" maintain expensive laboratories and baking departments where skilled men scientifically analyse each day's milling. None but the very best Red Fyfe wheat—rich in nutrition and healthfulness—can pass. For this reason bread made from ROYAL HOUSEHOLD FLOUR contains the maximum of food value and furnishes the maximum of energy and strength. And for the same reason "ROYAL HOUSEHOLD" makes the finest pies, cakes, biscuits, muffins, rolls, and pastry of all kinds. It is the one flour that a housewife should use in order to have her household baking strictly first class.

"Ogilvie's Book for a Cook" with 125 pages of Recipes that have been tried and tested will be sent free to your address if you mention the name of your dealer. 133

Roaring Horses.

Roaring or whistling has ruined many a promising young race horse and his owner's pocketbook at the same time. A horse that is a roarer when he gets heated begins to make a sound that can be heard sometimes as far as a city block, and some roars will choke and fall down right on the track.

The Insult

"The way that man looked at me was most insulting."
"Did he stare?"
"No; he looked once and then turned away as if I were not worth noticing."

Always Serviceable.—Most pills lose their properties with age. Not so with Parmelee's Vegetable Pills. The pill mass is so compounded that their strength and effectiveness is preserved and the pills can be carried anywhere without fear of losing their potency. This is a quality that few pills possess. Some pills lose their power, but not so with Parmelee's. They will maintain their freshness and potency for a long time.

"Why are you so angry with Waler?"
"He proposed to me last night."
"What of that?"
"Nothing. Only I accepted him the night before."

It is Wise to Prevent Disorder.—Many causes lead to disorders of the stomach and few are free from them. At the first manifestation that the stomach and liver are not performing their functions, a course of Parmelee's Vegetable Pills should be tried, and it will be found that the digestive organs will speedily resume healthy action. Laxatives and sedatives are so blended in these pills that no other preparation could be so effective as they.

WESTERN TOURIST TRAFFIC

Mountain Hotels Vastly Improved To Meet Continued Increase

Year by year the traffic to the Canadian Rocky Mountains is increasing at such a great rate that the mountain hotels have some trouble in satisfying all the demand for accommodation during the season. The Canadian Pacific Railway is continually improving and adding to its chain of mountain hotels, but even with the extra facilities thus afforded the accommodations are taxed to the uttermost. Every train westward takes with it a new contingent of tourists, and it has become the fashionable thing to spend a week or ten days in the mountains before going to the coast.

Banff, being in the centre of the Canadian National Park, is naturally one of the favorite stop-over points for travellers. It is situated in a district which is most advantageous for mountain climbing, fishing and other sports, and, as a result, the C. P. R.'s hotel at this point is well patronized. Recently the C. P. R. made several new improvements to the hotel, with the result that it is now more popular than ever. The improvements consisted of the addition of two new wings and a new swimming pool. The wings are built in the form of towers and contain sixty bedrooms. They are five storeys high, and, like the rest of the hotel, are of stone and mill construction. The ground floor of the new wing is given up to a spacious sun parlor while there is a driveway under the other wing. From now on this sun parlor will be a feature of the hotel accommodation. It is fifty feet square, and on three sides of it there is a raised dais reached by a series of steps, where the guests may rest while enjoying the view from the broad windows. Beyond the dais there is a conservatory where flowers bloom in great profusion, and the whole parlor is surrounded by glass walls, giving the sunlight free access to the room. The parlor is beautifully finished with couches and easy chairs, and the British Columbia ceiling is supported by a series of arches and columns. The swimming pool is situated north of the hotel and is protected by a number of awnings. It is 180 feet long and 60 feet wide, and is built entirely of concrete. There are sixty dressing rooms for guests wishing to use the pool, these being situated in a 180-foot building to the rear of the baths. The upper storey of this building is fitted up with Turkish baths, and there is underground connection with the hotel. In the centre of the large pool there is a small plunge bath where sulphur water is used. This smaller pool is 24 by 80 feet.

Both the sun parlor and the swimming pools were opened some time ago and they have been much praised by guests stopping at the hotel.

ZAM-BUK SAVED THIS BABY

Mrs. M. Barrett, 602 Moreau St., Montreal, says:
"A horrid rash came out all over my baby's face and spread until it had totally covered his scalp. It was irritating and painful, and caused the little one hours of suffering. We tried soaps and powders and salves, but he got no better. He refused his food, got quite thin and worn, and was reduced to a very serious condition. I was advised to try Zam-Buk, and did so. It was wonderful how it seemed to cool and ease the child's burning, painful skin. Zam-Buk from the very commencement seemed to go right to the spot, and the pimples and sores and the irritation grew less and less. Within a few weeks my baby's skin was healed completely. He has now not a trace of rash, or eruption, or eczema, or burning sore. Not only so, but cured of the tormenting skin trouble, he has improved in general health."
Zam-Buk is sold at all stores and medicine vendors, 50c. a box, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price, 6 boxes for $2.50. A certain cure for all skin diseases, cuts, burns, etc., and for piles.

Our time, knowledge and experience in the printing business is at your disposal when you are in need of something in this line. Don't forget this.

The high price of living has not affected our job printing prices. We're still doing high class commercial work of all kinds at prices satisfactory to you.

You might as well cut off your legs because you are running well in a footrace as to cut off your advertising because your business is too good.

Some business men are so fond of being deceived that they even endeavor to believe that they can reach the consumers of this district without advertising in The Sun.

Show cards for widows and inside are a fine form of silent salesmen. Make them brief, terse and pointed. Print them plainly, to be read at a glance.

Yours for 17 Cents a Day!

We announced this new sales plan recently, just to feel the pulse of the people. Simply a small cash payment—then 17 cents a day. That is the plan in a nutshell.

The result has been such a deluge of applications for machines that we are simply astounded.

The demand comes from people of all classes, all ages, all occupations.

The majority of inquiries has come from people of known financial standing who were attracted by the novelty of the proposition. An impressive demonstration of the immense popularity of the Oliver Typewriter.

A startling confirmation of our belief that the Era of Universal Typewriting is at hand.

A Quarter of a Million People are Making Money with

The OLIVER Typewriter

The Standard Visible Writer

The Oliver Typewriter is a money-maker right from the word "go!" So easy to run that beginners soon get in the "expert" class. Earn as you learn. Let the machine pay the 17 cent a day—and all above that is yours.

Wherever you are, there is work to be done and money to be made by using the Oliver. The business world is calling for Oliver operators. There are not enough to supply the demand. Their salaries are considerably above those of many classes of workers.

An Oliver Typewriter in Every Home!

That is the battle cry today. We have made the Oliver supreme in usefulness and absolutely indispensable in business. Now comes the conquest of the home.

The simplicity and strength of the Oliver fit it for family use. It is becoming an important factor in the home training of young people. An educator as well as a money maker.

Our new selling plan puts the Oliver on the threshold of every home in America. Will you close the door of your home or office on this remarkable Oliver off-er?

THE COPPER HANDBOOK

New Edition Issued Nov. 15, 1906.) Is a dozen books in one, covering the history, geography, geology, chemistry, mineralogy, metallurgy, terminology, uses, statistics and finances of copper. It is a practical book, useful to all and necessary to most men engaged in any branch of the copper industry.

Its facts will pass muster with the trained scientists, and its language is easily understood by the everyday man. It gives the plain facts in plain English without fear or favor.

It lists and describes 4636 copper mines and companies in all parts of the world, descriptions running from two lines to sixteen pages, according to importance of the property.

The Copper Handbook is conceded to be the World's Standard Reference Book on Copper

The mining man needs the book for the facts it gives him about mines, mining and the metal.

The investor needs the book for the facts it gives him about mining, mining investments and copper statistics. Hundreds of swindling companies are exposed in plain English.

Price is $5 in Buckram with gilt top; $7.50 in full library morocco. Will be sent, fully prepaid, on approval, to any address ordered, and may be returned within a week of receipt if not found fully satisfactory.

Synopsis of Canadian Homestead Regulations

ANY available Dominion Lands within the Railway Belt of British Columbia may be homesteaded by any person who is the head of a family, or any male over eighteen years of age, to the extent of one-quarter section of 160 acres, more or less.

Entry must be made personally at the local land office for the district in which the land is situated.

The homesteader is required to perform the conditions connected therewith under one of the following plans:

- (1) At least six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each year for three years.
- (2) If the father (or mother, if the father is deceased), of the homesteader resides upon a farm in the vicinity of the land entered for, the requirements as to residence may be satisfied by such person residing with the father or mother.
- (3) If the settler has his permanent residence upon farming land owned by him in the vicinity of his homestead, the requirements as to residence may be satisfied by residence upon the said land.

Six months' notice in writing should be given the Commissioner of Dominion Lands at Ottawa of intention to apply for patent.

Coal—Coal mining rights may be leased for a period of twenty-one years at an annual rental of $1.00 per acre. Not more than 2,560 acres shall be leased to one individual or company. A royalty at the rate of five cents per ton shall be collected on the merchantable coal mined.

KING OF THE NASHWAAK

RISE AND FALL OF ALEX. GIBSON OF NEW BRUNSWICK.

At Age of Ninety-Two Years Great Captain of Industry Sees His Properties Sold to Pay the Mortgages—Made a Fortune in Lumber on the Shores of Fundy and Built Great Cotton Mills.

According to New Brunswick papers, the property of the Gibson Railway & Lumber Co., at Gibson and other points in the province, is to be sold to satisfy mortgages aggregating half a million dollars. Full description of the property will soon be advertised, and of such variety are the holdings and so numerous the items that it is said the advertisement will fill twenty-eight columns of a newspaper. With this sale will depart from the hands of the veteran Alexander Gibson, the last of the great estate which he assembled and at least nominally directed during a longer working life than is granted to ninety-nine men in a hundred.

The majority of the people of New Brunswick may be described as farmers, but they are nearly always lumbermen first of all.

The spruce log has been the mainstay of the province for half a century, as the pine log previously was, and among the men who have brought the forest reserves of New Brunswick down to the dangerpoint, Alexander Gibson is easily first.

He was the big toad in the comparatively small puddle. Even J. R. Booth on the Ottawa, having regard to the extent of his field of operations, loomed hardly so large as Alexander Gibson, along the St. John River. To use a phrase coined and current in New Brunswick, and not unknown elsewhere, derived from the name of another large lumber operator, who preceded him, he was for a generation "the main John Glasier" of his province.

Born in the last year of the reign of George III. it was little past the middle of the century when Mr. Gibson had made a fortune as a lumber operator on the shore of the Bay of Fundy. In those days there is said to have been a crudity about his book-keeping. Whether he kept any books at all or not it was noticed that he usually tore up his receipts. But he was young and vigorous, and there was a large margin of profit in lumber, and therefore he prospered. When the timber along the bay shore had been pretty well cut or burned away about the end of the United States civil war, he moved 100 miles up the St. John River. There, opposite Fredericton, where the Nashwaak joins the main stream, Alexander Gibson built first a lumber mill, then a church, then the town of Marysville. He became the "King of the Nashwaak." His lumber operations ex-

LESS TIME IN THE KITCHEN

MORE TIME IN THE FRONT ROOM

That's your reward if you let MOONEY'S BISCUITS take the place of the bread and biscuits you bake yourself.

Get the big package or the sealed tin—both of them damp proof, dust proof, dirt proof—and ceeded those of any single operator in that part of the world either before or since. There have been those who cut more logs, sawed more feet of plank or board, or shipped more wood products abroad, but Mr. Gibson did the whole business himself.

His men felled his trees on his timber limits, his stream drivers brought the logs to his mills, he himself owned the tugs and scows that rafted the sawn product to the seacoast, he chartered the steamships that freighted it to the European market. When he acquired timber limits remote from sizeable streams, he built saw mills in the woods, and also 200 miles of railway from the Nashwaak to the Gulf of St. Lawrence to land the output of these at the nearest waterway.

Thirty years ago he built one of the largest cotton mills in Canada, at Marysville. He ruled his town with an iron hand. It was well for everyone to go to his Methodist church. It was certainly bad for anyone to be seen the worse for liquor. In politics he took a keen, though intermittent interest. Though his county (York) has a very large Orange vote, Mr. Gibson carried George E. Foster in 1896 by 1,500 majority, in spite of Foster's friendship for the remedial bill. Four years later Foster had to get a constituency elsewhere. It was understood Mr. Gibson expected to sell his railway, and Mr. Foster was no longer any use to him. Under ordinary conditions York has always been rather even fighting ground, but when Mr. Gibson saw fit to go into the contest his candidate was always a strong favorite. At such times, of the 400 electors in Marysville, about 373 usually voted his way.

Several years ago he sold his railroad, and it is now part of the Intercolonial; soon after it was built his cotton mill went into the combine, and not long afterwards all his property went into the hands of trustees. Indeed the forthcoming sale is a logical event in the sequence of his later life. In his last decade or two success forsook him. Perhaps a system suited to the conduct of larger affairs didn't naturally evolve from his early methods of doing business. Perhaps age didn't bring with it increased sagacity. Now, in his ninety-second year, this lumber king, cotton spinner, railroader, and local dictator, is left with nothing but the consolation that he did great things in his day and generation.

"In short," Mr. Damrosch ended, "he was as ignorant of music as old Jed Shucks and his wife were of city ways."

"Jed was describing, at a dorcas, his recent visit to New York."

"An' we went to a big department shop," he said, "an' we got inter one of them 'ere things wot whizzes ye clean up to the top—wot in tarnation is their name, Mar?"

"Shop-lifters," Jedediar," Mrs. Shucks replied."

The Flies that are now in your kitchen and dining-room were probably feasting on some indescribable nastiness less than an hour ago, and as a single fly often carries many thousands of disease germs attached to its hairy body, it is the duty of every housekeeper to assist in exterminating this worst enemy of the human race. Wilson's Fly Pads kill flies in such immense quantities as cannot be approached by any other fly killer.

Minard's Liniment cures garget in cows

Wine stains on table linen are removed by sprinkling them with salt, moistening with hot water and then pour boiling water through the stain until it disappears.

Through indiscretion in eating green fruit in summer many children become subject to cholera morbis caused by irritating acids that act violently on the lining of the intestines. Pains and dangerous purgings ensue, and the delicate system of the child suffers under the drain. In such cases the safest and surest medicine is Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial. It will check the inflammation and save the child's life.

SEVEN YEARS PAIN FROM ACUTE NEURALGIA

CURED THROUGH THE USE OF DR. WILLIAMS' PINK PILLS

Neuralgia is not a disease—it is only a symptom. It is the surest sign that your blood is weak, watery and impure, and that your nerves are literally starving. Bad blood is the one cause—good, rich, red blood its only cure. There you have the real reason why Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure neuralgia. They are the only medicine that contains, in correct proportions, the very elements needed to make new, rich, red blood. This alone reaches the root of the trouble, soothes the jangled nerves, and drives away the nagging, stabbing pain, and braces up your health in other ways. Mr. M. Brennan, an ex-sergeant of the 2nd Cheshire Regiment, now a resident of Winnipeg, Man., says: "While serving with my regiment in India, on a hill station, I contracted a severe cold which brought on acute neuralgia, at times lasting for three weeks. I was constantly suffering almost every month in the year for over seven years, the pain being sometimes so severe that I wished I was dead. On my return to England I seemed to get no better, though I spent large sums of money for medical advice and medicine. Then I came to Canada, and about a year ago saw the advertisement of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in a Winnipeg paper. Although I had begun to think my complaint was incurable I told my wife that I intended giving the Pills a fair trial. I was suffering from terrible pains when I began taking the Pills, but before the second box was finished the pain began to disappear, and under a further use of the Pills it disappeared entirely, and I have not had a twinge of it during the past year. Only those who have been afflicted with the terrible pains of neuralgia can tell what a blessing Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have been to me, and you may be sure I shall constantly recommend them to other sufferers."

These Pills are sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Necklace Fancies

One of the latest fancies in necklaces is one of braided seed pearl dear to our grandmothers. The lucky girl who has such a treasure stored away should bring it out and send it to the jeweller for cleaning.

Many of these braided pearl collars are in the imitation stones but so creamy and real-looking as to prove very popular especially with summer frocks.

The doctor stood by the bedside and looked gravely down at the sick man.

"Yes," said the sufferer faintly. "What is it?"

An Oil That is Prized Everywhere.—Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil was put upon the market without any flourish over thirty years ago. It was put up to meet the wants of a small section, but as soon as its merits became known it had a whole continent for a field, and it is now known and prized throughout this hemisphere. There is nothing equal to it.

No Ability to Digest Food

NERVOUS SYSTEM SO EXHAUSTED THAT VITAL ORGANS ARE FEEBLE IN ACTION

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

The digestive system is a wonderful piece of machinery, but power is necessary to make it effective.

In this case the power is the nerve force contained in the body, and, if the nerve force is lacking the digestive system becomes crippled and there is suffering from indigestion, nervous headaches, neuralgic pains, dizzy spells, weakness and discouragement.

Strength cannot be regained from the food you eat so long as digestion is so imperfect, but you can be restored by Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, which contains in condensed pill form the very elements of nature which go to form new nerve force.

Overwork, worry, anxiety and excessive mental effort exhaust the nervous system at a tremendous rate, and repair must be made before some dreadful form of disease sets in. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food invigorates the nerves which control the digestive fluids, sharpens the appetite, is slightly laxative, so as to encourage the action of the bowels and strengthens every organ of the body.

You can use this treatment feeling certain that every dose is doing you at least some good, and can prove it by noting your increase in weight.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, 6 boxes for $2.50, at all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

A Story For Independence Day

By ESTHER B. HAWTHORNE

A number of children were playing about the grounds of a country house; a white bearded old man was sitting on a porch reading a newspaper. The children were looking forward to the morrow—the anniversary of American independence. Finally they gathered in a knot, discussing with evident interest some (to them) important problem, casting occasional glances at the old man on the porch.

"You ask him, Lucy," said one of the boys to a girl of seven. "He'll do anything for you."

"Yes," chimed in the others. "Lucy is the one to do it. She'll get more than any of us."

Lucy, thus urged, started for the porch, evidently losing courage as she proceeded, for the nearer she approached the old man the more she seemed disposed to hang back.

"What is it, Lucy?" he asked, looking aside at her from the newspaper.

"Please, grandpa, won't you give us some money for the Fourth of July?"

Grandpa put his hand in his pocket, drew forth several silver coins and gave them to her. She was going away without a word when he asked:

"Don't you think I should have a kiss for that?"

She went to him, put up her lips, kissed him and ran away to the children. A consultation took place among them as to how they should the next day burn the money they had received, after which one of the older ones suggested that they thank grandpa for the gift. So they moved in a body to the porch, and their spokesman offered the thanks.

"You're welcome, children," he replied. "Your sending Lucy to me took me back to when I was a kid and my brothers and sisters sent me on a similar errand to my father."

"Did you have as good times on the Fourth then as we have now, grandpa?" asked one of the boys.

"I'm inclined to think we had better times. We were not so far then as we are now from that Declaration of Independence which—But sit down and I'll tell you about it."

The children gathered round, some sitting in wicker chairs, some on the steps, while Lucy perched herself on the arm of grandpa's rocker. When they were all comfortably settled he continued:

"We always had processions in those days, and in our processions we had something that we don't have now—several carriage loads of white bearded old men who had fought in the war that brought about the independence we are to celebrate tomorrow. I remember just how they looked and with what veneration we regarded them. Next came the veterans of the war of 1812. There were more of them, and they were younger than the Revolutionary soldiers. But today we have not these survivors of the Revolution to keep us in touch with the great struggle which evolved a nation."

"We children usually took part in the processions, the boys marching as soldiers, the girls making up groups on floats decorated with flowers. I remember marching myself with a dozen boys, all of us in white shirts and white duck trousers, drawing a little cannon. One of the boys marched at our head bearing aloft the stars and stripes. When we were tired we turned out of the line. Our standard bearer, not being notified, went proudly on with the flag till laughter among the spectators caused him to look behind him, when he discovered that he was marching alone. When he rejoined us he was the maddest boy I ever saw."

"In that procession we marched behind a hay wagon that had been fitted up for a float. It was covered with white sheets and both the body and the wheels decorated with flowers, while the harness was covered with a profusion of red, white and blue rosettes and streamers. In the center on a raised dais stood a girl personating the Goddess of Liberty. The rest of the wagon was covered with little girls from six to twelve or thirteen years old. I was one of two front boys who held the rope attached to our cannon, and I noticed especially one of the girls on the rear of the float. Her golden hair hung over her shoulders, and her eyes were great big blue ones. I straightway picked her out to fall in love with."

"Have any of you boys ever been in love?"

"There was no reply to this, and the speaker continued:

"A boy's love, as I remember it, is very funny. He is seized with a desire to 'show off' before the girl to whom he is attracted. When I saw the girl on the float looking at me I walked as if I was stepping on springs, holding my head up in the air as though I was mighty proud of myself. I must have marched an hour behind the float on which the blue eyed girl sat. When we left the procession I looked back at her, but girls of her age are apt to be offish with boys, and she turned her glance away. I supposed she had no use for me."

"She didn't make a face at you, did she?" remarked one of the boys.

"Oh, no, she didn't do that. But to proceed with my story—of course we were just like boys nowadays—tiring our crackers and our cannon, keeping up an incessant din all the afternoon. We couldn't wait till dark to set off our fireworks any more than you boys will be able to wait tomorrow night. When the last piece had been burned and we had eaten a watermelon or some ice cream we went to bed mourning that a whole year must pass before another Fourth of July would come around."

"Of course as we grew older our way of spending the day changed. When we reached the youth period we would get together at the country home of some one of our set of young fellows and girls. I remember that when I was eighteen years old I was invited to one of these Fourth of July parties composed of youngsters about my own age. I met there for the first time a girl about sixteen. She was called by a nickname which had been given her by her father when she was a baby. It was Tottie. The moment I looked at her I felt sure that I had seen her somewhere before. But when I saw that she didn't appear to regard me as a former acquaintance I made up my mind that I must have been mistaken. Of course we were now too old, the boys to fire crackers and cannons, the girls torpedoes, and we were obliged to find other means of amusements. The place where we were spending the day was partly a country home and partly a farm. Our hosts, who were the sons and daughters of the owner, got out a wagon used for carrying grain, and, covering its bed with straw, took us all on the afternoon of Independence day for a long ride."

"We sang songs and shouted and laughed loudly at the poorest jokes, just as boys and girls of that age have always done on such occasions and will always do to the end of time. But there was no harm in it, for the Fourth is a day devoted to noise, and we had the open country in which to do our singing and shouting. At every farmhouse we passed urchins who waved little flags at us, and we waved a return with our own flags and handkerchiefs."

"Men off here!" cried the driver as we came to a steep ascent, and we jumped from all parts of the wagon like startled frogs from a log. I was trudging along with the others behind the wagon, the girl they called Tottie being one of those at its rear end."

"I hope you're not going to be as disagreeable as you were once, she said to me, with a spark of mischief in her eyes."

"What do you mean? I asked."

"Oh, I saw you do a very mean thing once."

"When? Where?"

"I was sitting just as I am now on the rear of a wagon and you were walking behind."

"Do you mean to say that you have seen me before?"

"Of course I do."

"And what is the mean thing I did?"

"You didn't do it alone. Others did it too."

"Tell me."

"You were one of a juvenile artillery company dragging a small cannon in a Fourth of July parade. You all turned out of the line without notifying your standard bearer, who marched on alone, exciting a laugh from those who saw him, especially us girls on the float."

"I fixed my eyes on Tottie and kept them on her while she spoke. Gradually in the features of the girl of sixteen I brought back those of the girl whom I had fallen in love with at ten. Six years don't count for much after twenty, but between ten and sixteen the change in a boy or a girl is considerable."

"Just think of it, children; she had remembered me perfectly for years!"

"But I thought you said, grandpa," put in Lucy, "that when you turned out of the procession she didn't look at you."

"Yes, but I said girls of that age are apt to be offish."

"Go on," said one of the older girls.

"I thought it queer that I should have so long considered this girl a sort of sweetheart and then did not know her when I saw her again. But the fact that I had so considered her made me feel very differently toward her now that I had met her again. And another thing made a lot of difference to me—the fact that she had remembered me so long and recognized me notwithstanding that I had grown as tall as I am now. When we men got on to the wagon again I took a seat beside Tottie, and we talked over that procession—how proud we boys felt dragging our cannon."

"Well, when we came in from our ride, hungry as boys and girls are bound to be after an outing, we sat down to tea, and I took especial pains to secure a seat beside Tottie, and we kept on talking about that procession in which we had first met till the other boys and girls asked if that was the only Fourth of July procession we had ever taken part in. In the evening when the others were settling off the fireworks Tottie and I strolled away together and were so engaged with each other that we didn't see any fireworks at all. That's the end of the story."

"What became of Tottie?" asked the oldest girl.

"Oh, Tottie and I concluded to go through life together. We've never separated."

"You don't mean to say grandpa is Tottie?"

"Yes, she is."

"H'm!" said the oldest girl. "I knew that all the time."

MADE SURE OF IT.

The Gift Was Delayed, but the Groom Got the Bird.

A wealthy patron of the turf in New York told an amusing story of a favorite groom and a turkey.

"I had once promised this groom," he said, "a Christmas turkey, but somehow in the rush and flurry of December I forgot it. It was some days after Christmas when I remembered how I had overlooked my faithful old friend."

"Meeting him in the paddock one morning and intending to make good my forgetfulness, I said to the groom by way of a joke:

"Well, Jenkins, how did you like that turkey I sent you?"

"It was a very fine bird, sir," said the groom. "I came very near losing it, though."

"How so?" said I, astonished.

"Well, sir," said Jenkins, "Christmas morning came, and your turkey hadn't reached me, so I rushed right off to the express company and asked the manager what he meant by not sending the bird up. The manager apologized, sir, very politely, and he took me into a back room, where there were ten or fifteen turkeys hanging, and he said the labels had been lost off them and I'd just better take my choice. So I chose the largest, sir, knowing your generosity, and it was fine. It ate grand. Thank you very much indeed, sir."

Commas.

The French do not, as a rule, employ inverted commas to indicate a dialogue, but they employ the dash to indicate a change of speakers, which is just as bad. Certainly many punctuation marks are sadly misused or overused. Dickens flung unnecessary commas all over his pages—whole battalions of them. Walter Pater also employed them with extraordinary prodigality, frequently before the word "and" where the conjunction rendered them superfluous. Pater was also overfond of the mark of exclamation, so that when he drops a "Yes" into his measured style it must needs appear as "Yes!" But, though the Bible does without inverted commas, there is real art in its punctuation. How admirably it marks the cadence and helps the drama in that great story of the prodigal son!—London Chronicle.

Culpeper's Remedies.

Old time physicians prescribed even more unsavory remedies than rancid butter, which was Emperor Menelik's cure for malarial fever. In "Culpeper's Herbal," published originally in 1656 and reprinted as recently as 1820, are such prescriptions as "oil wherein frogs have been sodden till all the flesh is off from their bones," "horse leeches burned into powder" and "black soap and beaten ginger." Some of Culpeper's remedies are of a more practical nature. "If redhot gold be quenched in wine," he says, "and the wine drunk it cheers the vitals and cures the plague. Outwardly used it takes away spots and leprosis."

Making It Pleasant For Her.

Mrs. Goodsole (removing her wraps)—I've owed you a call for a long time, you know. I hate to be in debt, and I just felt that I couldn't rest easy until I had discharged my obligations by coming to see you. Mrs. Sliptung—Why, my dear Mrs. Goodsole, you shouldn't have felt that way at all.—Chicago Tribune.

Paid Him Back.

The Mean Thing—You're so conceited, Connie, that I believe when you get into heaven the first question you'll ask will be, "Are my wings on straight?" Connie—Yes, dear, and I shall be sorry that you won't be there to tell me.—Illustrated Bits.

Oldest Banknote.

The oldest banknote is in the Asiatic museum of St. Petersburg. It was issued by the Chinese government and dates from the year 1399 B. C.

SINES AND SONS.

Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree is the stage name of Henry Birnbaum, the actor-manager.

Senator Thomas S. Martin of Virginia has resided on the same plantation, two miles from Scottsville, since 1853.

Lyman J. Gage, ex-secretary of the treasury, has never recovered from the epidemic of bicycle fever of the middle nineties.

Senator Albert B. Cummins of Iowa was a surveyor in his early days and later assistant chief engineer on a railroad in Ohio.

President Taft has a "twin" in congress. He is George R. Malby, representing the Twenty-sixth New York district. Both were born Sept. 15, 1857.

Josef Stronsky, one of the most talented of the younger school of German composers, has been engaged to succeed Gustav Mahler as conductor of the New York Philharmonic orchestra.

Frederick C. Selous, the famous big game hunter, is an inveterate tea drinker and partakes of this beverage with every meal. Yet he has nerves of steel. He has been a total abstainer and a nonsmoker all his life.

Henry L. Stimson, the newly appointed secretary of war, is a New Englander by birth, who first came into prominence when President Roosevelt appointed him United States district attorney for the southern district of New York.

Woman's Suffrage.

A men's league for woman suffrage has been organized at Harvard college.

No less than seventy-four city and town councils of Great Britain and Ireland have adopted resolutions to petition parliament to pass the woman suffrage bill.

Professor A. R. Hatton of Western Reserve university says the greatest reason for giving the ballot to women is for the good influence it will have on women themselves.

Meeting under a banner reading "Equal Suffrage," the California W. C. T. U. convention, in recent session, unanimously passed a resolution favoring votes for women.

Some Questions.

Why do cities give work horse parades? The horses would rather take a day off in the clover field.—Toledo Blade.

A new daffydil is asking, "If Mrs. John Jacob Astor wore gauze at that London fancy dress ball, what did Delaware?" Hot, isn't it?—Memphis News-Scimitar.

The Post says, "Houston will not swallow the harem skirt." Wonder if they take the harem for mince pie or a new breakfast cereal.—Memphis Commercial Appeal.

Town Topics.

A new theater in Boston is to be called the Puritan. Now for a Boston church called the Gaiety.—Syracuse Post-Standard.

A team of street car horses in New York ran away and plunged into the East river. Street car horses? In New York city? Yep.—Buffalo Enquirer.

St. Louis wants a slogan. Out of 70,000 submitted not one was found to be satisfactory. What is the matter with "See St. Louis and skiddoo"?—Chicago Record-Herald.

Automobile Spins.

It is getting so that it is safer to be shipwrecked on the ocean than it is to be a passenger in a skidding automobile.—Syracuse Herald.

By degrees perhaps we shall get around to the place where the rule of reason will be applied to automobile races too.—Indianapolis News.

The latest argument for the automobile is to the effect that it minimizes the danger of pickpockets, especially after having paid a garage bill.—Atlanta Constitution.

Pert Personals.

Uncle Andy Carnegie was the only one J. P. Morgan never could tie up.—Baltimore Sun.

President Diaz promises to come back if there is any need of it. But, then, so did Jeffries.—Boston Globe.

Queen Mary's crown weighs only nineteen ounces, the weight being reduced, we presume, to insure the queen's head lying as easy as possible.—Detroit Free Press.

Political Quips.

Presidential booms are now subject merely to light variable winds. The squalls will come later.—Washington Star.

Wall street is beginning to worry about the next presidential election, and it's almost a year and a half off. Ain't it awful?—Rochester Herald.

Points For Mothers

Health and Beauty.

Dear American ladies, you are not very graceful. You are very beautiful, and you wear marvelous toilets, but you are not exceedingly graceful. I wonder why. Shall I tell you something I have sometimes thought since I came to your country?

Grace, real grace, is founded on natural, normal, perfect health. No, I do not mean the robust; I mean the virile, sinuous and supple. The big hips, the fat shoulders, are as unhealthy and unnatural as scrawiness and anaemia. Is there anything finer to see, more beautiful, than the absolutely sure grace of any living creature entirely healthy? I think not.

Now you are going to ask me what these things I am saying have to do with you. Must I make myself plainer? I have just explained that almost any normal, healthy living creature is naturally graceful. Well, then, can you not conceive that an unhealthy and abnormal creature might almost as necessarily be awkward?

No, I am not saying all American women are unhealthy and abnormal; but, to tell you the truth, it has sometimes occurred to me that a little more work—I mean by that definite and healthy occupation—would make the women of your country healthier and happier, more normal and more graceful.

Dear American ladies, never stand with your weight evenly divided, your heels together and your shoulders squared—that is, never stand in this position unless you wish to look like a German officer on parade. A woman's body as she stands in a drawing room or pauses to speak to a friend should always be relaxed. I call all the great Greek statuary to bear witness that what I say is so.

Remember that charming broken line on the left side of the Venus de Milo—the long, graceful sweep of the right side. That is the ideal of what I mean.

Always allow the weight of the body to rest more on one foot than on the other. Have the foot which is not bearing the weight lightly touching the ground. After all, it is but balancing the body.

Allow the entire side of the torso to relax with the foot and limb which is shirking the burden. That lets the hip and the shoulder down, throws up slightly and charmingly the hip and shoulder supporting the weight. The attitude is graceful, natural, altogether feminine.—Anna Pavlova in Harper's Bazar.

Best Way to Wash Flannel.

Flannels should be washed in warm suds that have had a little ammonia added to them. The flannels should be rubbed between the hands, not on a board, and dipped up and down in the suds until they are free from dirt and stains. Squeeze them with the hands until as much water as possible is removed and then rinse in water of the same temperature as that in which they were washed. Wring out again, hang in the shade and press them out on the wrong side while still damp. Flannels should never be placed in the sun to dry or they will shrink. Special care should also be taken when rubbing the garments to see that all the dirt is removed before they are wrung out and hung up to dry.

Small Girls Like Pajamas.

Mothers of small girls are finding out that their little daughters prefer for their night apparel pajamas like those worn by the boys rather than the more usual lingerie garments.

The just before bedtime romp, the hour of all hours beloved by the young folk, is "lots more fun," said a small girl recently, "if you're not bothered with flappy skirts."

The pajamas for girls are cut exactly like those which brother wears, but the materials are daintier in coloring and often in weave.

Attractive Bibs.

The expression "in flesh bib and tucker" will take on new significance if the mother adopts a novel idea recently seen. The ordinary child's bib is extended to the waist line, where it is cut into a belt to fasten around the waist. This shape is neat, and it stays in place. It may be made very attractive when embroidered in white with buttonholed slits, through which a ribbon may be run to tie at the back of the waist.

Pyramid of Cheops.

To rebuild the pyramid of Cheops under modern conditions would cost $100,000,000 and the labor of 40,000 men for two years.

Printing

We are prepared to do all kinds of Commercial Printing

On the shortest notice and in the most up-to-date style

BECAUSE

We have the most modern jobbing plant in the Boundary Country, employ competent workmen, and carry a complete line of Stationery.

WE PRINT

Billheads and Statements,
Letterheads and Envelopes,
Posters, Dates and Dodgers,
Business and Visiting Cards,
Lodge Constitutions and By-laws,
Shipping Tags, Circulars and Placards,
Bills of Fare and Menu Cards,
Announcements and Counter Pads,
Wedding Stationery,
And everything turned out in an Up-to-date Printery.

GOOD PRINTING—the kind we do—is in itself an advertisement, and a trial order will convince you that our stock and workmanship are of the best. Let us estimate on your order. We guarantee satisfaction.
